

WORKBOOK 08 LESSON 06

FILL IN THE BLANKS WITH THE CORRECT PREPOSITIONS: ABOUT, OF, IN, WITH, TO, BY, AMONG, ON, SINCE.

Ever since the beginning man has been wondering about his mind. One of the aspects that has greatly interested him are the different ways in which he is able to communicate with other people.

Man created language to be able to communicate himself orally with others. Later he invented graphic signs and was able to write to his fellow men. As time went by inventions like the telegraph, the telephone, radio, television, fax, computer and so on greatly simplified communication. All these ways of reaching his fellow human beings were the result of the use of the brain, man's conscious and mechanic part of the mind. They are means of communication that can be heard, seen and physically felt.

But some of man's most brilliant ideas (including many inventions) are felt rather than rationally made up. This is where telepathy, among so many other faculties, comes in. There are two basic kinds of telepathy: one is done by mental harmonization and is related to the brain; it consists of using the same wavelength of the brain that another person is using and has been greatly studied by scientists; the other one is done by mental projection and is based on the fact that all human beings are connected to one another by a common conscience.

The second kind of telepathy might be the first step to a further evolution of man, where all our previous inventions become unnecessary.
